

FOUR HAWAII PLANES STILL GOING

ISLANDS THRILLED AWAITING ARRIVAL OF PRIZE AVIATORS.

Every Precaution Is
Taken For Safety
Of Dole Flyers

HONOLULU, Aug. 17.—Excitement without precedent in the history of Oahu was manifest early today as all Honolulu, from Gov. W. R. Farrington down, awaited the arrival at Wheeler Field of the four Dole planes racing from the mainland.

Thronged streets, decorated cars, and besieged newspaper offices recalled a typically enthusiastic Hawaiian election. Most of the slogans prominently displayed from office buildings and on automobiles were boisterous prayers for the success of the Hawaiian entrant in the flight—Martin Jensen of Honolulu.

"Aloha to Jensen," was a popular watchword.

Some, however, were seen, wishing luck to other flyers—especially to Miss Mildred Doran, who is flying with Auggie Pedlar in the Michigan biplane. Goebel's "Woolaroc" and Frost's "Golden Eagle," also had their partisans.

The navy announced that thirty-two ships are standing by to rush assistance to the planes if they should fall distressed. The navy vessels will be deployed across the inter-island channels. Three submarines are posted off Hilo, on the island of Hawaii; the minesweeper Ortolan, and six submarines are on the lookout between Molokai and Maui; the mothership, Holland, and two submarines are blocking the channel between Molokai and the island of Oahu, and the sub-tender Widgeon and five submarines are stationed four miles apart between Oahu and Kaula.

The Widgeon and her flotilla fill the water gap through which Commander John Rodgers was drifting in his helpless plane when he was picked up yesterday. North of Kaula, five submarines are deployed at four-mile intervals.

With the navy armada thus arrayed, the chances of the Dole flyers missing the island group altogether and soaring off into the uncharted and landless space of the West Pacific are greatly lessened. The submarines, filling the stretches of open water between the islands, give the flyers a continuous target nearly 400 miles long at which to aim.

Meanwhile, the army was not less watchful. The searchlights on Wheeler Field and giant beacons flashed their cutting rays through the early morning darkness. The army announced that it would fire some bombs on Wheeler Field, heralding the arrival of each flyer. If weather conditions are good, the signals and possibly the planes themselves may be seen from Honolulu.

Capt. H. J. Adams, radio and telegraph officer of the Hawaiian department of the United States army, personally supervised the operation of the radio beacon on Hawaii Island. The beacon, connecting San Francisco and Hawaii, is an ether highway which the Woolaroc and the Hearst monoplane can follow with their radio sets. C. C. Shangraw, signal corps reservist that installed the beacon for the Maitland-Heggenberger pioneer flight, assisted Captain Adams.

Planes were in readiness at Wheeler Field to soar out to sea at daylight. The escort flyers, in relation, will cruise north and south of the island to Oahu not only to greet the mainland visitors but also to usher them to Wheeler Field, goal of the $35,000 flight.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17.—A delegation of officials of two international prohibition organizations—the world league against alcoholism, and the anti-saloon league—headed by Bishop Thomas Nicholson, of the M. E. Church, was to arrive here today to attend the funeral this afternoon of Mrs. Wayne W. Wheeler, and her father, Robert Chandler.

Mrs. Wheeler, wife of the general counsel of the anti-saloon league, died of burns sustained Saturday night in a gasoline explosion at a Michigan resort. Her aged father died of shock soon after Mrs. Wheeler had been injured.

The prohibition delegation was to come from Winona Lake, Ind., where the prohibition organizations are holding their convention this week.

The double funeral was to be held at 1 p. m. in charge of the Rev. K. G. Schatzman, and the Rev. A. B. Riker. Hundreds of telegrams, telephone messages and letters of condolence from friends and political foes alike throughout the country continued to pour in here to Wheeler today.

CANTONESE CITY OF NANKING ATTACKED BY WINNING FORCES

Southerners Converge In
Last Minute Defense
Of City

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—Northern troops have captured the important city of Pukow from the Cantonese defenders and are now bombarding Nanking, former headquarters of Chiang Kai Shek, according to advices received here this afternoon.

An earlier dispatch said that the northerners were not expected to enter Pukow until Friday.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—Following an intense bombardment, northern troops have occupied Wuyi and Puchen, suburbs of Pukow, according to word received here today. The northerners entered the two suburbs on Tuesday afternoon. Pukow is a point of strategic importance from a military viewpoint and northern troops have been converging upon the city for a week.

The Cantonese defenders of Wuyi and Puchen were thrown into panic by the cannonading and fled precipitately towards Nanking.

The northerners are expected to enter Pukow on Friday.

Twenty thousand Cantonese, sent from Nanking to defend Wuhu, are reported to be returning. Nanking is crowded with demoralized southern soldiers, who are unwilling to return to the fighting front.

The Shanghai authorities are making strong precautions for protection of the city following receipt of news that five trainloads of Pei Chung Hsi adherents have been entrained for this place. These troops are reported to be unruly and it is feared that they are seeking loot. Discipline of the soldiers has broken down following the resignation of Gen. Chiang Kai Shek as commander in chief.

WITNESS IN FAMOUS CASE TELLS STORY OF MURDER TRIAL

DAYTON, O., Aug. 17.—An eye witness to the double killing for which Sacco and Vanzetti stand convicted and face the death chair has been located in Dayton. He is Morris Cohen of Brockton, Mass.

Cohen was a witness in the prosecution of the two men, but he says that he then was unable to identify either one of the two men on trial as the killers and that he would be unable to do so now although he vividly recalls the enactment of the crime, as he and a companion viewed it from the shoe factory window, for which the payroll was intended.

Cohen and fellow employees were awaiting the arrival of the paymaster. Parmenter who was killed along with the guard Berardelli. According to Cohen, Parmenter ran at the first shot which caused the death of the guard. Another shot and Parmenter dropped dead.

According to Cohen there were five men in the slayer gang which approached South Braintree, Mass., shoe factory. One remained at the wheel of the automobile. The other four scattered about the immediate vicinity.

Cohn says he was unable to either aid the prosecution or the defense. The entire affair was enacted so quickly, he says that he could not identify any of the men involved.

Cohen says he believes Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted largely on circumstantial evidence. He said the only material witness introduced by the state was a woman, who he said was equally as far away from the scene of the slaying as he himself was.

TRUSTEES MUST USE APPROVED METHODS FOR ACCOUNTS, SAID

State Control Board Demands System At
Wilberforce

The state control board will insist that trustees of the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce University adopt a system of handling accounts approved by the auditor of state and the director of finance. It was revealed when a copy of a resolution passed by the board in Columbus Monday arrived here.

At the same meeting the control board demanded that trustees re-instate eight discharged employees of the institution under threat that the control board would not approve the appropriation for the institutions. Both ultimatums were handed down in a resolution passed unanimously by the board.

The resolution further assures the trustees of its desire to cooperate with them in every way in the operation of the department. An amendment offered by Joseph T. Tracy, state auditor, to eliminate the reference to the reinstatement of the employees was voted down by the board of which R. D. Williamson, Greene County representative, is a member by virtue of his position as chairman of the House finance committee.

The resolution passed Monday follows: "Be it resolved that it is the sense of the controlling board that the board will defer action upon the payroll schedule of the institution (1) as the employees recently discharged are re-instated and (2) the board of trustees of the C. N. and I. Department adopt a system of handling accounts approved by the auditor of state and the director of finance, and that a copy of this resolution be conveyed to the board of trustees with the assurance that the controlling board desires in every way to cooperate with the board of trustees of the C. N. and I. Department of the institution."

Disregarding the Labor Day holiday, most of the Greene County Schools will open their fall terms, Monday, September 5, according to announcement by County Supt. H. C. Aultman.

Local superintendents will call their teachers together just before the opening day, for the purpose of issuing supplies, and giving final instructions. Teachers who are not working under a local superintendent will be notified of a date when they will meet in the office of the county superintendent for that purpose.

POSSE COMBS HILLS OF WEST VIRGINIA; SHOT FROM AMBUSH

LOGAN, W. Va., Aug. 17.—A posse of forty citizens and officers today were combing the hills in the vicinity of Island Creek, near here, for a group of supposed moonshiners who yesterday attacked a party of ten campers with rifles from ambush, instantly killing three of the campers, and wounding a fourth man.

The campers, who said they were hunting ginseng, included a state prohibition officer and his son, both of whom were included in those killed. Officers are working on the theory that the attackers, believing the party was hunting for moonshiners stills, of which several were later found in the vicinity, organized the attack to protect their stills.

Those killed were Edward Hensley, 50, prohibition officer, his son, Donald, 19, and Ernest Marcum, Howard Tomlin, seriously injured was brought to a hospital here.

The attack occurred in a remote spot in the forest at noon yesterday and the first news was brought here late last night by Davis Hensley, a brother of Edward Hensley who made his way from the camp on foot to Logan, to obtain help. A posse was quickly formed and the bodies were brought here.

Two suspects were arrested in the vicinity when the posse arrived, but no charges have been filed against them, and officers said they had little evidence to connect them with the shooting.

DOLE PRIZE PILOTS WINGING WAY OVER PACIFIC IN AIR RACE

WINGING WAY OVER PACIFIC IN AIR RACE

Hearst Plane, Jensen's Ship, Goebel's Plane and Miss Doran's Crew Survive Start—All Pilots Confident

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Somewhere between the shores of California and the Hawaiian island of Oahu, four airplanes which hopped off yesterday noon from the Oakland airport, are winging their way today toward Honolulu, $35,000 in prize money and the fame of winning the Dole race.

They are: the Hearst plane, "Golden Eagle," Martin Jensen's "Aloha," Art Goebel's "Woolaroc" and the "Miss Doran" carrying Miss Mildred Doran, the "Flying School Marm" from Flint, Michigan.

The "Woolaroc" was reported by the 36th division of United States destroyers at 8 o'clock last night in latitude 34:15 north, longitude 132 west, or approximately 517 miles from San Francisco and all was well. Navy officials estimated that the "Woolaroc" is averaging sixty-three miles an hour.

The Golden Eagle carries only radio receiving apparatus and had not been heard from since the take-off.

The Aloha was reported last passing the motorship Silver Fir, 185 miles out at sea.

The Miss Doran was reported passing the Farallones at 2:43 p. m.

Absence of news from the fliers is causing no anxiety as nothing was expected until the Dole birds came within sight of the squadron of four destroyers, deployed across their course to watch for them and signal their safety.

Weather reports received from the destroyers on the route told of low-flying stretches of clouds that might easily hide the racing planes.

Bennett Griffin and Al Henley, crew of the Oklahoma, which came back because of motor trouble, said last night they'd stick tight to await the outcome of the race.

DAYTONIANS WILL GIVE HUMAN SKULL TO U. S. INSTITUTE

DAYTON, O., Aug. 17.—A human head will be presented to Smithsonian Institute following the return of an exploring party from South American jungles, in January or February.

The presentation will be made by Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Spencer Dickey who have been spending a four months' vacation with relatives at Tippecanoe City.

Dr. Dickey and his wife, with another scientist and a moving picture camera man compose the party, now enroute to Para, Brazil. They will ascend the Amazon river to Manaus which is at the junction of the Rio Negro. There the exploration proper will begin. The party will explore the river to its source in a country where strange Indian tribes may be encountered. The party will go to the basin of the Orinoco and then follow that stream through Venezuela to the Gulf of Paria and board a steamer for New York.

Two years ago Dr. and Mrs. Dickey headed an exploration party to the jungle of Ecuador, spending nine months among the Jivoro Indians and brought back with them many trophies.

It was here that Dr. Dickey treated a native for snake bite. The man recovered and was so overjoyed at the white man's ability to cure him that he presented Dr. Dickey, with the head of his wife's boy friend whom he had killed. The head had been cured according to native custom and occupied an honored place in the Jivoro's hut.

Dr. Dickey is a former New Yorker but he has spent twenty years roaming the wilds of South America. Mrs. Dickey is the daughter of Wilmer C. Staley, of Tippecanoe City. Both are members of the Royal Geographical Society of London.

There are three submarines off Hilo, the mine sweeper, Ortolan, and six submarines in the channel between Hawaii and Maui, and five submarines between Molokai and Oahu. The sub-tender Widgeon and five submarines are stationed four miles apart between Oahu and Kaula.

The John Rogers came into five submarines north of Kaula four miles apart. The army announced that searchlights and beacons have been set up on the landing field.

LEMONS WHITEN THE SKIN

Better than "Bleaches" for Freckles, Tan, etc.

The juice of two lemons squeezed into a bottle with Orchard White, will soothe sunburn, and clear up freckles, tan, discolored skin quicker than anything you can buy already prepared, and it doesn't cost you near as much. Any druggist can sell you Orchard White, and it only takes a minute to mix it with the juice of two lemons. Then you have enough to last you all season. It makes a delightful lotion which you can put on your face, neck, arms or hands at any time, and it will keep them nice and white. Mix a bottle now, so you will have it handy to use should your skin begin to turn dark, or rough.

AUTOIST COMPLAINS OF TAR ON ROAD; ENGINEER GIVES CAUSE

The Evening Gazette asked Henry W. Walsh, Xenia, division engineer for the state highway department to answer an inquiry received by this paper complaining against the tar application on the Dayton and Xenia Pike.

Both letter and answer should be interesting to readers, especially to motorists and especially in view of the fact that further improvements of this nature will be undertaken. The letters follow: Editor, Gazette:

Dear Sir:—

May I suggest that the public would be interested to know why the state highway department "chooses" to repair both sides of the Dayton and Xenia Pike at once and then cover it with a coat of sticky tar that covers your automobile and is next to impossible to remove.

As one motorist I would be interested to know why the department was in such a hurry to complete this work that although the stone for the job was on the scene for months, when the workmen really started they had to do the work on both sides, leaving no dry side for traffic. It seems to me that by doing half the road at a time, with an interval between, the tar would be given opportunity to soak into the road where it belongs instead of being carried away on every passing automobile. I might add that removal of this tar from an auto is not only a difficult job but an expensive one. Granting that to do the job slowly and carefully would mean a more expensive operation, the cost would not be comparable to the value of the advantage to the motorist because it would be worth much to the autoists to not have to drive through the tar.

READER.

To the Editor
The Xenia Gazette.

Dear Sir:—

In reply to the suggestion that the recent surface treatment of the Dayton Pike should have been applied one side at a time and allowed to cure before the other side was treated, I can only say that while nothing is impossible, some things are so impractical that they cannot be considered seriously. It is the policy of the Ohio Highway Dept. to tar one half of a road at a time thus leaving the other side open for traffic. This particular job was so short that we gained very little though we followed this procedure.

It is only two and two tenths miles long and required only 3,500 gallons or one third of a car load of tar. As the freight is the same on a full car as on a fraction, it was necessary to ship this with another job. It required the truck distributor two days to apply this on account of the longer haul making the expense of applying the tar about $150. If they had been required to apply one side and then go to some other job and return to finish it would take one day to go and one to return thus making four days instead of two or doubling the expense and what would be gained?

The treatment consisted of one strip on each side three and one-half feet wide, with fourteen feet of old road between. When the traffic is light, one can keep to the center portion, when the traffic is heavy he can drive one wheel on each side of the freshly treated strip. As there is a white center line painted on this pavement the traffic would have to observe this safety measure though the tar was only on one side of the road. Therefore, if the traffic can not observe the center line and miss the fresh tar we would only be prolonging the trouble by applying one side at

The Theatre

Fired by the success of other co-comedians, two more cinema stars have decided to trust their future film fate in each other. Strangely enough, neither is known for his comedy work.

The two—Louis Wolheim and William Boyd—made up their minds to plunge into the mirth-making business following filming of "Two Arabian Nights," in which Boyd was a doughboy and Wolheim a hard-boiled sergeant.

Boyd probably is best known for his work in "The Volga Boatman," wherein his role was anything but mirth provoking. Wolheim is the rough-neck captain in the stage version of "What Price Glory?"

Ditching drama for the chuckle business is nothing new, however. Wallace Beery did it when he quit being a villain, hated by all good folk, to team up with Raymond Hatton in several uproarious comedies.

The Beery-Hatton success started a flood of co-comedians to work. Karl Dane and George K. Arthur were paired with instant success. Chester Conklin and George Bancroft were also teamed up, and now Boyd and Wolheim are taking a crack at it.

"Fallen Angels" the Arthur Somers Roche story now running serially in a magazine, will be filmed by Universal.

Beatrice Van and James Gruen both scenario writers, after solving the love affairs of countless characters, solved their own the other day when they were quietly married.

May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel, years ago worked effectively as a screen combination. Now the movie partnership has been revived and

FIREMEN WIN DIVISION B TITLE IN XENIA PLAYGROUND LEAGUE

By BOB ADAIR

First place in Division B of the Xenia Playground Association went to the Xenia Fire Department when Firemen defeated the Lang Chevrolet Co. team 15 to 10, Tuesday night.

The Firemen completely outclassed their rivals, jumping upon the deliveries of Gegner from the beginning and continuing to hit him freely throughout the game. On the other hand the Lang men were unable to solve the slants of Downey at will and what hits they did get were kept well scattered. The teamwork of the Firemen was probably one of the best exhibitions on that line seen this year. By their defeat the Chevrolet

Co. lost the slim chance that they held of winning first place. They now have only one more game to play. The Firemen will meet the winners of Division A in a series for the city championship sometime soon. They have no more games left to play on their regular schedule.

Wednesday night the Post Office team and the Butchers hook up in another Division B game. Lineup: Firemen: Buffington, 3b; Downey, p; Cope, ss; Dickey, cf; Haller, 2b; Swartz, rf; Dice, c; Fisher, lf; Briley, lb. Lang Co.: Wead, 3b; McCoy, rf; Berger, c; Gegner, p; Lang, cf; Smith, ss; Cain, lb; Gibney, lf; Rachford, 2b; F. Smith, 2b. Umpires—Boxwell and Turnbull.

SPRINGFIELD TEAM IS GLUTTON FOR PUNISHMENT; HERE SUNDAY

Springfield Millard Clothiers are coming here next Sunday with the intention of avenging a defeat suffered two weeks ago at the hands of Jesse Chambliss' trusty Reserves.

On that occasion a free-hitting contest ended in favor of the local ball team when the Washington Park champions nosed out their opponents by the score of 9 to 8.

A strengthened line-up and considerable confidence will be the stock in trade of the visiting horse hide delegates upon the occasion of their second invasion of the Xenia yard. They are coming here with the idea that a victory will earn them a series with the Reserves and an opportunity to grab the series and restore the self-esteem they lost in the game two weeks ago. If they are defeated they are off the slate.

Jesse Chambliss has not been standing around the cigar store idle and has strengthened his dykes at all possible points. Harold Dodson, the well-known all-around athlete from Dayton, who has taken upon the hurling burden at the Washington St. yard with much aplomb will be on the firing line Sunday.

Pete Tidd, former Stivers High star athlete and more recently a member of the Dayton Central League team, who made his debut with the Reserves last Sunday, has appended his signature on the dotted line and will wear the same uniform at the short stop position in next Sunday's melee. Judge Simler another addition over whom Chambliss is doing much modest gloating will also be available for the infield or the outfield.

The visitors expect to start "Red" Lucas and the game will begin at 3 o'clock.

CINCINNATI HOLDS ROGERS BUT SILENT UPON DISPOSITION

Xenia police have received no further information from the Cincinnati police department regarding George Rogers, local negro, who is held in that city for his alleged connection with the robbery and assault of the Bryan family in Cincinnati nearly three weeks ago.

Rogers, who was arrested in Cincinnati early Sunday while in company of Virgil Bell, also of this city was said to have admitted driving the car for a Newport man and a Cincinnati man, the night of the robbery. The car was stopped at three places which his two companions entered while he remained in the car, Rogers told police. The last house he said, was the Bryan place. His companions, he said, had plenty of money after they had been in the Bryan house, while before that they were without funds.

Local people who know Rogers said that he displayed a big roll of bills, immediately after the night of the Bryan attack. He said that he had won the money "shooting craps" in Xenia, although he was known to have spent several days in Cincinnati at that time. "Big Bertha" Hamilton, Xenia colored woman is serving a sentence in the Marysville penitentiary for women for cutting with intent to kill, on account of an assault made on Rogers at her home on Fair St., a little more than a year ago. Rogers engaged in a fight with Agnew White, in Mrs. Hamilton's home, and while the two rolled on the floor, the woman stabbed Rogers in the back. His wounds were so serious that he was expected to die, but recovered. His wife, Marie Rogers, sued him for divorce last Saturday.

LUCKY NICKEL!

A Good Cigar Need Cost No

More. Here's How and Why

You've heard about five-centers that "should cost more." You can't be blamed for wondering if there is such a thing. You won't wonder any more if you will shoot one lucky nickel. You'll know and you'll tell the world.

The nickel you put down for a Havana Ribbon means smoke luck from the first puff. It means mildness and mellowness and all-day satisfaction. It means you can keep right on smoking Havana Ribbon cigars and like them better all the time. You'll say, "How can they make it so good?"

Here's how. Havana Ribbon sold at more than a nickel for years. Men liked them. They sold like hot cakes by the million. Volume production brought the price down. That's the whole story. So drop in at the nearest cigar store armed with one nickel only. And get set for a real surprise.

SHAGIN MOURNING PASSING OF CYCLE RACER ON SATURDAY

Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, is one of the friends of "Smiling Eddie" Brinck, who is mourning the death of the motorcycle racer, which occurred in a hospital at Springfield Mass., Saturday night. Brinck died of a fracture of the skull suffered when a tire blew out on the fourth lap of a three mile national championship race. Brinck and Shagin were associated in side car motorcycle races in Hamilton in 1916. At that time Shagin considered going into solo racing, and it was Brinck who discouraged him in this. The local officer attended the funeral of the dead racer which was held at Emmanuel Church, Dayton, Wednesday morning. Three hundred motorcycleists, friends and admirers of the dead champion racer, formed an escort of honor for his body to Calvary Cemetery. His home was in Dayton virtually all his life. Recently he had returned from Australia where he took part in motorcycle races.

DESERTED BY WIFE CLAIM OF MINISTER

While he was away on a charge, his wife deserted him, taking all her effects, the Rev. John Coleman alleges in a petition for divorce from Isabella Coleman. He returned home sick, he says and had to depend upon neighbors for care. He has not seen his wife since March, 1924 and does not know her whereabouts, he says. He charges his wife's son and daughter-in-law with causing the estrangement. They were married July 22, 1918.

GET MY GOAT, BUT GIVE ME MY DOG

CHICAGO.—Tinus Haffa, a politician, appeared before Judge John Sharbo explaining that somebody had gotten his goat. "Your honor," said he, "I'll be doggoned if somebody didn't steal my dog," as he asked the court to issue a warrant for Sammy Rizzon, who, he claimed, had the dog. "Your dog?" said the judge. "I thought somebody had gotten your goat." "Yes, that's right," Haffa explained. "They got my goat when they stole my dog." "Then you want a warrant issued for stealing a dog because somebody got your goat?" inquired the judge. "No, no, your honor, not because he got my goat, but because he stole my dog." "Oh!" said the judge.

Peter's Adventures

SAVED IN SPITE OF THEMSELVES

Very well, then. If the Bees insisted upon mistaking him for an enemy they would sting him, of course. But Peter wasn't going to be a coward and let anything like that prevent him from trying to save the life of the busy little honey makers. As for Hoppy—the fellow jeer at him if he liked.

There was the hollow in which Hoppy had been sitting.

He was only angry because he was losing his prey. So not a bit of attention did the boy pay to either the Bees' crows buzzing or Hop Toad's mocking, but kept right on yelling and waving his arms above his head. Suddenly the flyers realized that Peter was trying to signal to them, and all their anger turned to fear. Their buzzing rose louder and louder as each bee, in turn, tried to warn the others of their danger.

"Listen, sisters to what the Two-

Legs says. He is no enemy but a friend and is trying to warn us of that wicked creature of whom our wise Queen bade us beware. He cries 'The bold brigand is abroad in the highway! Fluff has been taken! Others of our sisters have fallen victims!'

"Quick! There is not a moment to be lost. Let us rise high into the air. Better to brave the breeze and storm than to fly into Hop Toad's mouth. Woe is us! What dreadful news have those of us who are left to tell the Queen! Will she ever forgive our carelessness? Thanks Two-Legs, dear Two-Legs! We owe our lives to you!"

Humming their gratitude the Bees soared into the air and slowly and sadly winged their way back to the hive to tell the bad news to their Queen.

When he was quite sure that the last one of them was safe Peter returned to Hop Toad.

"Sorry old chap to have to scare away your meal like that but—"

Peter stopped talking suddenly; stared, rubbed his eyes and looked again. He had been speaking to thin air. There was the hollow in which Hoppy had been sitting—empty. But not a sign anywhere of the bold brigand.

DIGNIFIED DUCK COMMANDS RESPECT

BOURNE, England.—A traffic policeman on a busy main road near Bourne, didn't think anything of holding up traffic for ten minutes to give a duck a chance to lay an egg. When he noticed a duck waddling across the road, he halted automobiles to give the bird a chance. But half way over the road she sat down. Having laid the egg she leisurely resumed her journey. After the egg was salvaged by the policeman the halted cars were permitted to proceed.

XENIA GOLFERS MAY COMPETE IN DAYTON DISTRICT TOURNEY

Several Xenia golfers may enter the annual Dayton district golf tourney, which starts Thursday morning at the Miami Valley Country Club. Entries will be received until five o'clock Thursday. A special invitation has been extended to nearby club golfers, as the program outlined is one of the finest in the history of the classic, while the race for title honors should be a keen one. Arrangements have been made for a daily seventy-five cent luncheon at the club house.

The tourney will start promptly at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, and the entry list at that time is expected to be swelled greatly by entrants during Wednesday and Thursday morning. The tourney will be finished Sunday.

Paul Stoppleman, from the McGregor club, is the defending champ. He has held the title for the last two years, and will be out to set a record.

A handicap affair will also be run in connection with qualifying rounds, with the three net scores receiving special prizes. Players will receive their club handicaps. There will be no prizes for the best low gross scores. Wednesday morning there were over twenty entries for the tourney.

DREAD DISEASE IS SPREADING IN OHIO BUT NO CASES HERE

Rapid spreading of infantile paralysis and exhaustion of the supply of Rosenow serum, believed the only effective treatment, have caused a serious condition in Ohio. Colonel C. P. Robbins, chief of the division of communicable diseases of the state health department, has made known.

Although fifty-three cases, with six fatalities, have been reported to the department, so far this month, only two bottles of the serum exist. They are in a Columbus drug house.

Since January there has been a rapid increase in the disease, recent tabulations by health authorities show. The figures ordinarily would not indicate alarming conditions.

ditions, according to health authorities, if the Rosenow serum could be obtained. Officials of the manufacturing company told Colonel Robbins they are doing all in their power to meet the demand but it probably will be several weeks before a supply will be available to physicians.

Warning was issued by the department today to physicians to report cases now. Neglect of this and of quarantine measures will be disastrous.

There were seventy-seven known cases on Aug. 15, which have occurred since July 10. Only sixty-seven of these have been reported by card to the state health department. Of these seventy-seven cases six are known to have died. There are thirty-six cases in Tuscarawas and Belmont Counties, including seventeen in Martins Ferry and eleven in Uhrichsville and Dennison. Five cases have been reported in Marion.

There are no cases of infantile paralysis in Xenia, according to Dr. A. D. DeHaven, city health commissioner, and it is believed that the county is free from that malady. Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner, is out of the city. This locality is also free from diphtheria, which has been spreading in some Ohio counties.

Sally's Shoulders

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

"Would you lend me a thousand dollars, and not ask me what I want it for?"

CHAPTER XXXIX

FOR a minute it seemed to Sally that she must be dreaming. She stood there, rooted to the spot, wondering why Beau was packing a suitcase in the middle of the night.

Where was he going? . . . Why was he getting ready to leave the house like a thief in the night?

Like a flash the answer wrote itself across Sally's quick brain: "Money!—It's because of money!" She knew Beau and his great weakness.

Then, like a flash she was in the room, bending over him. At her light touch on his shoulder he jumped as if he had been stung, and turned quickly.

Her whisper was hardly more than a quick breath: "Come here!"

Without a sound she was out of the bedroom, across the hall and the dark dining room. She could hear him padding close behind her as she groped for the switch in the living room to turn on the lights.

They flashed up, and she faced Beau tensely. Her lips opened stiffly, not to ask a question, but to state a fact.

"Beau, you've taken some more money. . . . Tell me how much." It seemed to her that she had known for weeks that this would happen.

She was not like a girl of 20 in that moment. She was a woman—with a woman's knowledge looking out of her blue eyes with their heavy shading of lashes.

But Beau wouldn't meet her look. His eyes went from one corner of the room to the other—from the floor to the ceiling. Finally he just flicked her with that shifty gaze of his.

"What do you mean, more money?" he asked bitterly. "When did I ever take any money?"

"Why, those bad checks you gave Ted Sloan," replied Sally, wondering how he could forget them, when she had only begun to pay them off for him.

"Oh, those!" His voice was sulky. "Aren't you ever going to get through, throwing those up to me. They were nothing—I'd have paid them off myself if you hadn't butted in."

For a minute Sally was speechless with surprise.

Then she began to understand him—that he would never take the blame for anything, not even in his own thoughts.

Just as Mrs. Jerome preferred to think that her husband had left her because of another woman, instead of admitting that he was because he couldn't live the way she wanted to live—with unmade beds, bit-or-miss meals taken from cans or delicatessens, dust and untidiness.

"What's the trouble now, Beau?" Sally asked gently. "Please tell me—I'll try not to butt in, as you call it, this time. But maybe I can help."

She could see that he was in desperate trouble about something. He was like a hunted animal in his terror—afraid, almost, to tell his own sister what he had done.

He stood still for a minute, picking at his fingers nervously, looking around the cozy, familiar room as if it were some place that he never had seen before. Then suddenly he turned as if he were going to leave it.

But, just as suddenly, he swung back to Sally, and began to tell her what was wrong.

"I've taken some more money, see?" he asked, and his voice was low and hoarse. "From the bank where I work. I've just taken it. Get that through your head. Stolen it is what I mean."

Then he looked squarely at her

with his light-blue eyes, and there was defiance in his face.

"It's sure to be found out, and they'll come here for me—and that's why I'm going now. I'm not going to be arrested, and ruin Mabel's life for her. She's the one I'm thinking about—Mabel!" His voice broke on his small wife's name.

By the time he had finished speaking, Sally was ready with her answer. "But, Beau, it isn't going to help matters for you to run away. It's going to make them all the worse."

Beau stared at her. He shook his handsome blond head dully, and, as Sally looked at it, she wondered how so handsome a head could hold so many dishonest impulses as Beau had.

"What you've got to do," said Sally, thinking quickly and sharply, "is to stay right here and put back the money you've taken. How much was it, and how did you manage to get away with it?"

Beau's lips curled. "I don't trust you or anybody enough to give myself away to them," he said. "I won't tell you how I got the money—but what I did was one grand."

"One grand? How much is that?"

"A thousand dollars," explained Beau. "And it's all gone. I played the ponies with it—and lost it all, as usual." His bitterness was in his voice and face. "I always lose. I never get any kind of a lucky break."

"A thousand dollars," said Sally to herself. Her earnings for a whole year! The mere thought of it was paralyzing.

For two or three minutes she could not think of a thing to say. She stood looking intently into Beau's blank face. And he looked back at her, with his lips hanging loosely and his shoulders sagging.

"Well!" she said at last. "We'll have to get the money from somewhere. Won't we, Beau? And then you'll have to put it back and quit the job at the bank. It's no place for you to work."

"I'll say it isn't," Beau answered. "When I see all the jack lying around, and then think how Mabel wants a new dress and how I haven't got a single shirt with whole cuffs, I go kind of nutty. I guess—"

"You won't have to have ragged cuffs if Mabel would mend them up once in a while!" Sally spoke sharply, for she was out of patience with Mabel. "And you know you can't afford that car of yours!"

Beau shrugged his shoulders and looked ugly. "Well, don't rub it in! Don't kick a guy when he's down," he growled ungratefully. "Where are you going to get that grand for me?"

"Aunt Emily," Sally told him. "If she has it, she'll lend it to me. I'm going to start working for her pretty soon, and I can pay it back to her if she'll just give me enough time."

Beau looked brighter. He knew that, somehow or other, his women-folk would save him. They always had.

"Goodnight," he said briefly, and went to bed.

Sally tiptoed back to her own bed. But she could not sleep. She lay awake, listening for the sound of a board creaking or a suitcase lock snapping. She was afraid that Beau might try to get away after all.

The next morning at 2 o'clock Sally was marching up River road on her way to Aunt Emily's.

The house on River road looked just as it always did, facing the eastern skies, and catching the pale autumn sunshine on its window panes.

The only difference was that over the gate a wooden sign hung:

THE HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD CHICKEN DINNERS SERVED FROM 6 TO 8

"By jinks, she's doing business already!" said Sally to herself with an amused twinkle in her eyes.

It was like Aunt Emily to go ahead with her own plans, saying nothing to anybody about them. There was nothing namby-pamby about Aunt Emily. She stood on her own feet. Only she did not stand. She ran. She galloped ahead.

When Sally rang the doorbell a strange woman answered it. A large, plump, comfortable looking woman with sharp blue eyes, pink cheeks, and a smudge of flour on her apron front.

"Yes, Miss Jerome's here," she said in answer to Sally's question. "She's in the office."

She led Sally into the small room that once had been the linen room of the big old house.

It had nothing in it but a desk and two straight chairs. And on one of the chairs sat Aunt Emily, looking very stiff and prim in a dark blue silk dress.

"Well, if it isn't little Sally!" she exclaimed when her niece stepped into the bright businesslike little place. And what brings you 'way out here this morning?"

She always struck straight to the heart of things.

Sally was like her—direct and quick. "Money," said she. "Aunt Emily, would you lend me a thousand dollars and not ask what I want it for?"

Aunt Emily's fine, firm lips came together with a snap. "I would not!" she declared promptly and forcibly, "because I'd know what you wanted it for. For Millie—or for Beau! And they've had enough of my money, thank you!"

She got up and brushed the palms of her hands one against the other, as if she were washing her hands of the whole Jerome family.

"Let me show you my dining room," she said, and as she held open the door she deposited a kiss on Sally's velvet flushed cheek. "You know I'd give my niece Sally anything I had, don't you? But the rest of the family have had the last nickel I'll ever give them."

The dining room was a beauty. The chairs and tables in it had been painted soft green and covered with flowered chintz. There were black candlesticks on each table, and they held jade-green candles. The curtains were the softest of white dotted muslin, and on the floor were green-and-white woven rugs.

At any other time Sally would have gone into raptures over the dining room. But this morning nothing could lift the leaden weight on her heart. Nothing could raise the drooping corners of her mouth.

"Aunt Emily, I'm coming to work for you on the first of November, if you still want me," she said. "And I'll pay you back that money, somehow or other, if only you'll let me have it. Beau has got himself into some trouble—"

"I don't care what Beauregard Jerome has done!" Aunt Emily shook her head vigorously. "I made myself poor to give to his father, and I'm through!" She brought her thin hand down flat and firmly on the edge of the table nearest her to show that she meant what she said. Sally shrugged her shoulders.

"Well, where do I go from here?" she asked, hesitating.

I just didn't know

I REMEMBER now how my friends used to tell me about Prince Albert; how they would make what sounded like the most extravagant claims for it; and how I would say "Uh-huh," and proceed to fill my pipe from the same old package. I just didn't know!

But I found out. One day, the store where I buy my tobacco didn't have my old brand. I heard another customer standing beside me say "Prince Albert" to the man behind the counter. All that I had heard about Prince Albert came back to me in a flash.

I bought a tin. "Took a chance," as I thought. As I opened it, I was met by the most inviting fragrance I had ever known. I thought of the woods after a gentle rain. It made my mouth water for a taste of such tobacco in my pipe. I tamped-in a load and lighted up.

What a taste! Cool and sweet and mild, with just enough body to make every puff a smoke-experience. I tried another load—and another. I was "sold." P.A. was my brand from then on. My only regret is that I didn't make the discovery sooner. Good old P.A.!

FOUR HAWAII PLANES STILL GOING

ISLANDS THRILLED AWAITING ARRIVAL OF PRIZE AVIATORS.

Every Precaution Is
Taken For Safety
Of Dole Flyers

HONOLULU, Aug. 17.—Excitement without precedent in the history of Oahu was manifest early today as all Honolulu, from Gov. W. R. Farrington down, awaited the arrival at Wheeler Field of the four Dole planes racing from the mainland.

Thronged streets, decorated cars, and besieged newspaper offices recalled a typically enthusiastic Hawaiian election.

Most of the slogans prominently displayed from office buildings and on automobiles were boisterous prayers for the success of the Hawaiian entrant in the flight—Martin Jensen of Honolulu.

"Aloha to Jensen," was a popular watchword.

Some however, were seen, wishing luck to other flyers—especially to Miss Mildred Doran, who is flying with Augie Pedlar in the Michigan biplane. Goebel's "Woolaroc" and Frost's "Golden Eagle," also had their partisans.

The navy announced that thirty-two ships are standing by to rush assistance to the planes if they should fall distressed. The navy vessels will be deployed across the inter-island channels. Three submarines are posted off Hilo, on the island of Hawaii; the mine sweeper Ortolan and six submarines are on the lookout between Molokai and Maui; the mothership, Holland, and two submarines are blocking the channel between Molokai and the island of Oahu, and the sub-tender Widgeon and five submarines are stationed four miles apart between Oahu and Kauai.

The Widgeon and her flotilla fill the water gap through which Commander John Rodgers was drifting in his helpless plane when picked up two years ago. North of Kauai, five submarines are deployed at four-mile intervals.

With the navy armada thus arrayed, the chances of the Dole flyers missing the island group altogether and soaring off into the uncharted and landless space of the West Pacific are greatly lessened. The submarines, filling the stretches of open water between the islands, give the flyers a continuous target nearly 400 miles long at which to aim.

Meanwhile, the army was not less watchful. The searchlights on Wheeler Field and giant beacons flashed their cutting rays through the early morning darkness. The army announced that it would fire some bombs on Wheeler Field, heralding the arrival of each flyer. If weather conditions are good, the signals and possibly the planes themselves may be seen from Honolulu.

Capt. H. J. Adams, radio and telegraph officer of the Hawaiian department of the United States army, personally supervised the operation of the radio beacon on Hawaii Island. The beacon, connecting San Francisco and Hawaii, is an ether highway which the Woolaroc and the Hearst monoplane can follow with their radio sets. C. C. Shangraw, signal corps reservist that installed the beacon for the Matland-Hegenberger pioneer flight, assisted Captain Adams.

Planes were in readiness at Wheeler Field to soar out to sea at daylight. The escort flyers, in relays, will cruise north and south of the island to Oahu not only to greet the mainland visitors but also to usher them. Wheeler Field, goal of the $35,000 flight.

Delegation Of Dry Organizations Represent Bodies

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17.—A delegation of officials of two international prohibition organizations—the world league against alcoholism, and the anti-saloon league—headed by Bishop Thomas Nicholson, of the M. E. Church, was to arrive here today to attend the funeral this afternoon of Mrs. Wayne B. Wheeler, and her father, Robert Candy.

Mrs. Wheeler, wife of the general counsel of the anti-saloon league, died of burns sustained Saturday night in a gasoline explosion at a Michigan resort. Her aged father died of shock soon after Mrs. Wheeler had been injured.

The prohibition delegation was to come from Winona Lake, Ind., where the prohibition organizations are holding their convention this week.

THREE DAYS LEFT IN CONTEST

With only three more days remaining before the close of the Gazette's pony contest, contestants were busy piling up votes to offset the rush of the "dark horses" before the drive closes Saturday.

Guido Pesavento, who was in fourth position Monday, began a seventh inning rally that raised his vote total but did not change his standing in the column of contestants and gains were also reported by James McCormick and Jacques Adams.

The list Wednesday still showed Howard Hackett, Yellow Springs, leading the lists with Edwin Anderson second and George Garrett third. "Beauty," a handsome Shetland pony, hangs in the balance as the contestants make their last-minute efforts.

"Beauty" will have a new owner after the votes are counted Saturday evening and who this new owner will be depends upon the final activities of contestants during these last three days. It is expected that Saturday's vote report will have a big bearing on the result, it being presumed that contestants are holding back until the final day.

CANTONESE CITY OF NANKING ATTACKED BY WINNING FORCES

Southerners Converge In
Last Minute Defense
Of City

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—Northern troops have captured the important city of Pukow from the Cantonese defenders and are now bombarding Nanking, former headquarters of Chiang Kai Shek, according to advices received here this afternoon.

An earlier dispatch said that the northerners were not expected to enter Pukow until Friday.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—Following an intense bombardment, northern troops have occupied Wuyi and Puchen, suburbs of Pukow, according to word received here today. The northerners entered the two suburbs on Tuesday afternoon. Pukow is a point of strategic importance from a military viewpoint and northern troops have been converging upon the city for a week.

The Cantonese defenders of Wuyi and Puchen were thrown into panic by the cannonading and fled precipitately towards Nanking.

The northerners are expected to enter Pukow on Friday.

Twenty thousand Cantonese, sent from Nanking to defend Wuhu, are reported to be returning. Nanking is crowded with demoralized southern soldiers, who are unwilling to return to the fighting front.

The Shanghai authorities are making strong precautions for protection of the city following receipt of news that five trainloads of Pei Chung Hsi adherents have entered for this place. These troops are reported to be unruly and it is feared that they are seeking loot. Discipline of the soldiers has broken down following the resignation of Gen. Chiang Kai Shek as commander in chief.

WITNESS IN FAMOUS CASE TELLS STORY OF MURDER TRIAL

DAYTON, O., Aug. 17.—An eye witness to the double killing for which Sacco and Vanzetti stand convicted and face the death chair has been located in Dayton. He is Morris Cohen of Brockton, Mass.

Cohen was a witness in the prosecution of the two men, but he testified that he then was unable to identify either one of the two men on trial as the killers and that he would be unable to do so now although he vividly recalls the enactment of the crime, as he and a companion viewed it from the shoe factory window, for which the payroll was intended.

Cohen and fellow employees were awaiting the arrival of the payroll master, Parmenter who was killed along with the guard Berardelli. According to Cohen, Parmenter ran at the first shot which caused the death of the guard. Another shot and Parmenter dropped dead.

According to Cohen there were five men in the slayer gang which approached South Braintree, Mass., shoe factory. One remained at the wheel of the automobile. The other four scattered about the immediate vicinity.

Cohen says he was unable to either aid the prosecution or the defense. The entire affair was enacted so quickly, he says that he could not identify any of the men involved.

Cohen says he believes Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted largely on circumstantial evidence. He said the only material witness introduced by the state was a woman, who he said was equally as far away from the scene of the slaying as he himself was.

TRUSTEES MUST USE APPROVED METHODS FOR ACCOUNTS, SAID

State Control Board Demands System At
Wilberforce

The state control board will insist that trustees of the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce University adopt a system of handling accounts approved by the auditor of state and the director of finance if it is revealed when a copy of a resolution passed by the board in Columbus Monday arrived here.

At the same meeting the control board demanded that trustees of the board of trustees in every way in the operation of the department of the institution under threat that the control board would not approve the appropriation for the institutions. Both ultimatums were handed down in a resolution passed unanimously by the board.

The resolution further assures the trustees of its desire to cooperate with them in every way in the operation of the department. An amendment offered by Joseph T. Tracy, state auditor, to eliminate the reference to the re-instatement of the employees was voted down by the board of which R. D. Williamson, Greene County representative, is a member by virtue of his position as chairman of the House finance committee.

The resolution passed Monday follows: "Be it resolved that it is the sense of the controlling board that the board will defer action upon the payroll schedule of the C. N. and I. Department until such time (1) as the employees recently discharged are re-instated and (2) as the board of trustees of the C. N. and I. Department adopt a system of handling accounts approved by the auditor of state and the director of finance, and that a copy of this resolution be conveyed to the board of trustees with the assurance that the controlling board desires in every way to cooperate with the board of trustees of the C. N. and I. Department of the institution."

POSSE COMBS HILLS OF WEST VIRGINIA; SHOT FROM AMBUSH

LOGAN, W. Va., Aug. 17.—A posse of forty citizens and officers today were combing the hills in the vicinity of Island Creek, near here, for a group of supposed moonshiners who yesterday attacked a party of ten campers with rifles from ambush, instantly killing three of the campers, and wounding a fourth man.

The campers, who said they were hunting musk, included a state prohibition officer and his son, both of whom were included in those killed. Officers are working on the theory that the attackers, believing the party was hunting for moonshine stills, of which several were later found in the vicinity, organized the attack to protect their stills.

Those killed were Edward Hensley, 50, prohibition officer; his son, Donald, 19, and Ernest Marcum, Howard Tomlin, seriously injured were brought to a hospital here.

The attack occurred in a remote spot in the forest at noon yesterday and the first news was brought here late last night by Davis Hensley, a brother of Edward Hensley who made his way from the camp on foot to Logan, to obtain help.

A posse was quickly formed and the bodies were brought here. Two suspects were arrested in the vicinity when the posse arrived, but no charges have been filed against them, and officers said they had little evidence to connect them with the shooting.

DAYTONIANS WILL GIVE HUMAN SKULL TO U. S. INSTITUTE

DAYTON, O., Aug. 17.—A human head will be presented to Smithsonian Institute following the return of an exploring party from South American jungles, in January or February.

The presentation will be made by Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Spencer Dickey who have been spending a four months' vacation with relatives at Tippecanoe City.

Dr. Dickey and his wife, with another scientist and a moving picture camera man compose the party, now enroute to Para, Brazil. They will ascend the Amazon river to Manaus which is at the junction of the Rio Negro. There the exploration proper will begin. The party will explore the river to its source in a country where strange Indian tribes may be encountered. The party will go to the basin of the Orinoco and then follow that stream through Venezuela to the Gulf of Para and board a steamer for New York.

Two years ago Dr. and Mrs. Dickey headed an exploration party to the jungle of Ecuador, spending nine months among the Jivaro Indians and brought back with them many trophies.

It was here that Dr. Dickey treated a native for snake bite. The man recovered and was so overjoyed at the white man's ability to cure him that he presented Dr. Dickey, with the head of his wife's boy friend whom he had killed. The head had been cured according to native custom and occupied an honored place in the Jivaro's hut.

Dr. Dickey is a former New Yorker but he has spent twenty years roaming the wilds of South America. Mrs. Dickey is the daughter of Wilmer C. Staley, of Tippecanoe City. Both are members of the Royal Geographical Society of London.

DOLE PRIZE PILOTS WINGING WAY OVER PACIFIC IN AIR RACE

Hearst Plane, Jensen's Ship, Goebel's Plane and Miss Doran's Crew Survive Start—All Pilots Confident

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Somewhere between the shores of California and the Hawaiian island of Oahu, four airplanes which hopped off yesterday noon from the Oakland airport, are winging their way today toward Honolulu, $35,000 in prize money and the fame of winning the Dole race.

They are: the Hearst plane, "Golden Eagle," Martin Jensen's "Aloha," Art Goebel's "Woolaroc" and the "Miss Doran" carrying Miss Mildred Doran, the "Flying School Marm" from Flint, Michigan.

The "Woolaroc" was reported by the 36th division of United States destroyers at 8 o'clock last night in latitude 34:15 north, longitude 132 west, or approximately 517 miles from San Francisco and all was well. Navy officials estimated that the "Woolaroc" is averaging sixty-three miles an hour.

The Golden Eagle carries only radio receiving apparatus and had not been heard from since the take-off.

The Aloha was reported last passing the motorship Silver Fir, 185 miles out at sea.

The Miss Doran was reported passing the Farallones at 2:43 p. m.

Absence of news from the fliers is causing no anxiety as nothing was expected until the Dole birds came within sight of the squadron of four destroyers, deployed across their course to watch for them and signal their safety.

Weather reports received from the destroyers on the route told of low-flying stretches of clouds that might easily hide the racing planes.

Bennett Griffin and Al Henley, crew of the Oklahama, which came back because of motor trouble, said last night they'd stick tight to await the outcome of the race.

DOLE FLIGHT LOG

Tuesday:
12:32 p. m. Hearst's "Golden Eagle" hops off.
12:35 p. m. Martin Jensen takes off in the "Aloha."

2:04 p. m. Augie Pedlar makes second start in the "Miss Doran."
1:05 p. m.—Aloha skims over Farallon Islands, 20 miles off shore.
2:35 p. m. Silver Fir sights Aloha 185 miles out.
2:45 p. m. Miss Doran sails over Farallones.
4 p. m. Aloha turns south into steamer lane, sighted by S. S. Wilhelmina.
4:35 p. m. Woolaroc reports to Wilhelmina that she's 300 miles out, radio beacon working fine.
10 p. m. Destroyer squadron hears Woolaroc reporting 53 miles out.
11:30 p. m. Destroyer Corb, spots Woolaroc by radio compass at 685 miles from Golden Gate.

from the Oakland airport. He sped up his motor to a 115-mile-an-hour pace, according to Lee Schoenherr, pilot of a pursuit plane which trailed him for 115 miles. Frost cut his speed to about 90, once well under way.

At the 115-mile mark, Frost was still pointing her nose up, and he was better than 2,000 feet high at that time, says Lee.

The four airplanes should be capable of reaching Hawaii in from twenty-four to twenty-seven hours. All planes should be able, if necessary, to remain in the air for thirty-two hours, according to the requirements of the official committee.

Here are the farewells of the Dole flyers, who are still in the air, uttered just before hopping off from Oakland airport:

Art Goebel, pilot of the Woolaroc: "When I reach Hawaii I am going to gather the balance of the Hawaiian decorations to match these I now have around my neck." (Goebel already has received two leis.)

Martin Jensen, pilot of the Aloha: "Believe me, I am looking forward to landing at Honolulu because I already have ordered a big chicken dinner."

Jack Frost, pilot of the Golden Eagle: "I expect to make this flight in from twenty to twenty-one hours. And I expect to have a late breakfast in Honolulu tomorrow morning."

Augie Pedlar, pilot of the Miss Doran: "I started out to take Miss Doran to Honolulu and we're going to get there—straw hat and all!"

AUTOIST COMPLAINS OF TAR ON ROAD; ENGINEER GIVES CAUSE

The Evening Gazette asked Henry W. Walsh, Xenia, division engineer for the state highway department to answer an inquiry received by this paper complaining against the tar application on the Dayton and Xenia Pike.

Both letter and answer should be interesting to readers, especially to motorists and especially in view of the fact that further improvements of this nature will be undertaken. The letters follow: Editor, Gazette.

Dear Sir:—
May I suggest that the public would be interested to know why the state highway department "chooses" to repair both sides of the Dayton and Xenia Pike at once and then cover it with a coat of sticky tar that covers your automobile and is next to impossible to remove.

As one motorist I would be interested to know why the department was in such a hurry to complete this work that although the stone for the job was on the scene for months, when the workmen really started they had to do the work on both sides, leaving no dry side for traffic. It seems to me that by doing half the road at a time, with an interval between, the tar would be given opportunity to soak into the road where it belongs instead of being carried away on every passing automobile. I might add that removal of this tar from an auto is not only a difficult job but an expensive one. Granting that to do the job slowly and carefully would mean a more expensive operation, the cost would not be comparable to the value of the advantage to the motorist because it would be worth more to the autoists to not have to drive through the tar.

READER.

To the Editor
The Xenia Gazette.

Dear Sir:—
In reply to the suggestion that the recent surface treatment of the Dayton Pike should have been applied one side at a time and allowed to cure before the other side was treated, I can only say that while nothing is impossible, some things are so impractical that they cannot be considered seriously. It is the policy of the Ohio Highway Dept. to tar one half of a road at a time thus leaving the other side open for traffic. This particular job was so short that we gained very little though we followed this procedure.

It is only two and two tenths miles long and required only 3,500 gallons or one third of a car load of tar. As the freight is the same on a full car as on a fraction, it was necessary to ship this with another job. It required the truck distributor two days to apply this on account of the longer haul making the expense of applying in the tar about $160. If they had been required to apply one side and then go to some other job and return to finish it would take one day to go and one to return thus making four days instead of two or doubling the expense and what would be gained?

The treatment consisted of one strip on each side three and one-half feet wide, with fourteen feet of old road between. When the traffic is light, one can keep to the center portion, when the traffic is heavy he can drive one wheel on each side of the freshly treated strip. As there is a white center line painted on this pavement the traffic would have to observe this safety measure though the tar was only on one side of the road. Therefore, if the traffic can not observe the center line and miss the fresh tar we would only be prolonging the trouble by applying one side at a time.

TO SUPPORT GIBSON FOR G. A. R. OFFICE

Ohio's twenty-nine delegates to the G. A. R. national encampment to be held September 11-16 at Grand Rapids, Mich., are to be instructed to support the Rev. J. King Gibson D. D. chaplain at the National Military Home, Dayton, for chaplain-in-chief.

A resolution to that effect which was passed at the recent state encampment in Canton points to Dr. Gibson's "good record as a soldier in the civil war, having served as a soldier in Company C 149th regiment, O. V. I."

Dr. Gibson is a cousin of Dr. A. C. Messenger of this city and is well known here. He is senior aide on the staff of Frank A. Walsh, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., has twice been department chaplain and for the last twelve years has been chaplain at the National Home, Dayton. He is a Presbyterian minister, and for a time was moderator of the Ohio synod.

The Theatre

Fired by the success of other co-comedians, two more cinema stars have decided to trust their future film fate in each other. Strangely enough, neither is known for his comedy work.

The two—Louis Wolheim and William Boyd—made up their minds to plunge into the mirth-making business following filming of "Two Arabian Nights," in which Boyd was a doughboy and Wolheim a hard-boiled sergeant.

Boyd probably is best known for his work in "The Volga Boatman," wherein his role was anything but mirth provoking. Wolheim is the rough-neck captain in the stage version of "What Price Glory?"

Ditching drama for the chuckle business is nothing new, however. Wallace Beery did it when he quit being a villain, hated by all good folk, to team up with Raymond Hatton in several uproarious comedies.

The Beery-Hatton success started a flood of co-comedians to work. Karl Dane and George K. Arthur were paired with instant success. Chester Conklin and George Bancroft were also teamed up, and now Boyd and Wolheim are taking a crack at it.

"Fallen Angels," the Arthur Somers Roche story now running serially in a magazine, will be filmed by Universal.

Bestrice Van and James Gruen both scenario writers, after solving the love affairs of countless characters, solved their own the other day when they were quietly married.

May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel years ago worked effectively as a screen combination. Now the movie partnership has been revived and

DRESSING UP XENIA

Frequent comment on the appearance of the business section of Xenia and its individual business houses as compared with cities comparable in size is elicited from Xenians who visit these other cities.

In one Ohio town in which the leading department store is ill kept and badly operated there is indirect praise for Xenia's similar stores, such as Jobe Bros., and Hitchison and Gibney's, where cleanliness, brightness, orderly arrangement and good management bespeak metropolitan merchandising and efficient methods.

Xenia is not only dressed up but it is continuing to dress up, which is necessary to continued progress. There is a matter of personal as well as civic pride involved.

Xenia, being proud, is glad to point to the new front on the Schmidt Bldg., E. Main St., the improvements rapidly nearing completion on the Flynn Bldg., Detroit and Second Sts., including the new auto sales rooms that greatly improve the appearance of W. Second St., the new Lang building on E. Main St., and other improvements, some not so recent, which have rejuvenated the picture of Xenia's downtown district.

Xenia merchants, alive to the appearance of their stores and properties, now need only boulevard lights to show these buildings off to their best advantage at night.

POOR LITTLE KING

The little king of Rumania is not to be envied by healthy American boys who face the necessity of working for a living. One can imagine few more pathetic figures in the world than this youngster, who, no matter how hard he tries, will never be able to earn his bread.

Here's a child who is destined, through no fault of his own, to miss all the thrills that come with the attainment of seemingly impossible things. For, to one who is a king at five, everything must seem possible and nothing interesting.

And, after all, if the child should grow up and take his throne at his majority, he will have attained just what? Why, nominal rulership over a country with a population a little larger than that of the most populous state in the United States. He will rule a few more people than Governor Al Smith rules. But he will not have anything approaching the power, freedom or authority that the governor of an American state possesses.

He will fall heir to feuds and quarrels and political dissensions over a thousand years old, and he will know before he inherits them that he will be totally powerless to do anything to settle them or smooth them over.

That's if he succeeds in deed and in truth to the throne when he comes of age. It seems almost impossible that any such thing should happen, however, when you consider the uncertain and troublous course of history in the Balkan nations.

An American boy, born in very moderate circumstances, on a farm or in a village in Iowa or Nevada or Georgia, is almost sure to have a better time in life than this poor little king.

HUNTING NEW WORLDS

F. G. Pease, telescope designer and builder, is planning the largest telescope in the world. He has the brains, the imagination, and the mechanical means for constructing the instrument at hand. All he needs is twelve million dollars.

This big telescope, when finished, will discover new worlds to the human eye. It will enable man to learn more about the universe in which he plays a part not always noble.

But twelve million dollars! What fine cruisers that would buy to keep up with other nations. We are not sure that mankind can afford such a telescope.

The Way of the World

HAIR TRIGGER REPORTS

It is the age of investigations. The trouble is that many so-called investigations are little more than a basis for an inaccurate, half-baked report. Out at the University of Iowa, an investigation, started by a member of the faculty, reveals the "information" that liquor flows among the students as freely as pop, that co-eds drink beer in booths, and do all sorts of things they shouldn't. "Call your boot-legger and have your liquor left on your doorstep in a milk bottle," one student is reported as having said.

Anybody who knows much about colleges and college students knows that the boys and girls who get into the "investigation reports" are the exceptions. It's mostly all talk and it is unfair and unjust that hair-trigger reports are taken seriously.

THE HUMAN TOUCH

The Queen of Holland will send her daughter to college in the fall. Instead of living by herself, after the usual fashion of royalty this girl will share her quarters with other girl students. Queen Wilhelmina is a wise woman. She knows that people are people, and that the human touch makes majesty more majestic.

THE WILL TO GET THERE

Dudley Woodbridge is appointed as a teacher in a famous southern university. The name means little to you. But Dudley Woodbridge, with a wife and two children, won a high degree at an Illinois law college. He made his way by peddling newspapers. He has delivered papers for the last 10 years. It is said he walked 20 miles a day.

There is no stopping the man who has within him that "something" which is a mixture of ambition and persistence.

HUMOR HELPS

A lawyer, unused to the practices of the supreme court of the United States, addressed the dignified judges as "gentlemen" instead of saying "your honors." He apologized.

"Don't apologize for calling us gentlemen," chuckled Chief Justice Taft. "That's what we try to be."

Humor in high places helps. And Mr. Taft, by making an uncomfortable lawyer comfortable, proved himself a gentleman.

NEEDLESS WORRY

Worry is the great American disease. No use pretending you can avoid all worry. But a lot of it is unnecessary. For example, why worry about any situation in which you have made up your mind to do what you think you ought to do? In the long run, no harm can come from doing as near right as you know how.

MENU HINT

Spanish rice is the principle dish of the dinner or supper menu below. The peach pie is made according to a housewife's recipe, which she states, pleases her family and friends very much.

Spanish Rice Combination Salad
Creamed Carrots
Peach Pie Coffee

TODAY'S RECIPES

Spanish Rice—One cup rice, one cup finely chopped onion, one cup tomatoes, one Spanish sweet pepper, three to four cups water or bouillon, one tablespoon sugar, one tablespoon butter. Cook the rice in boiling water or bouillon for fifteen minutes. Melt the butter in a pan and add chopped onion and pepper. Cook until light brown then add tomatoes and sugar. Drain rice and add to the other mixture. Place rice in a baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for one-half to three-quarters of an hour. Cheese may be grated over the top to add flavor, or left over meat may be added to the dish.

Peach Pie—Line the pie tin with your favorite pie crust and fill with sliced peaches. Beat an egg well and then add a cup of sugar slowly. Pour this over the peaches. Put on upper crust and bake as usual.

SUGGESTIONS

New Apple Pie—It is usually such a chore to prepare the early small apples, that any method of preparing them which is easier is welcomed. In the making of pies one can simply quarter, core and, of course, remove any spots in the early apples. Then slice the quarters very thinly as this helps to disguise the fact that the skins are all left on. Complete the pie in your family's favored way and they will not be disappointed in the result.

Baked Cookie Frosting—Mix a tablespoon of soft butter and one of grated chocolate or cocoa and enough sugar to make a mixture crumbly. Sprinkle over the rolled cookie dough and roll very lightly. Then cut out cookies as usual.

For variety use the butter and sugar, a very little flour and a few drops of vanilla the same way.

Use Magnifying Glass—It is sometimes hard to tell just what the figures are in the fractional numbers given in newspaper recipes so keep a small magnifying glass with recipe book and it only takes an instant to be sure whether it is one-third or one-eighth, and it would make quite a difference in the result if one guessed wrong.

WOMAN SCORDED

A man I know, on his way home one night met a flashily dressed woman of the streets, half-dressed from drink. Taking pity on her, he offered to have a taxi cab and send her home. But while waiting at the curb for a taxi cab, he saw friends approaching.

"I mustn't be seen standing here with you," he said. "Let's step into this alleyway until these people pass."

She began to yell at him in high indignation. "If you're ashamed to be seen with me," she screamed, "you can just go on about your business."

No woman ever stinks so low that she isn't infuriated if a man doesn't wish to be seen with her.

In mingling with employees of a big retail store during the lunch hour yesterday, I noted the surprising fact that the store's buyers seemed to be taught more seriously than their sellers.

Even stenographers from the business offices behaved somewhat patronizingly toward competent sales people, but they were deferential toward the buyers.

Answers to Correspondents

The Hors D'Oeuvres

Recently my medical society had its meeting at one of the beach towns near New York. It was preceded by a shore dinner. A woman doctor sat opposite me. The general impression which she gave was that of a rather dowdy, middle-aged woman, for she was very fat and unattractively dressed. A liberal dish of the hors d'oeuvres (in this case olives, radishes, celery, and the rolls and butter were brought on. Before the clam chowder was served, Dr. A. we'll call her, had eaten ten good-sized olives, six radishes, a quarter of a bunch of celery, two rolls and two pats of butter! This came approximately to 600 C.

Naturally, during the course of the meal, we got to talking about overweight, and she told me she was only twenty-eight and that she had always been overweight. She knew my book but had never practiced it consistently. However, she's started now. And do you know what remark I made to her that spurred her on? It was simply this: "Look here, girl, you cut out this bread and butter and olive business before your meal. Get after yourself and reduce now. Before you come to the age where you have to be thinking of wrinkles from the loss of fat."

She was fifty-two pounds overweight and I told her to take a year and reduce it, as she said her chief trouble before was that she would go to it so strenuously and overdo it, and then undo it all in one meal, and think "What's the use?"

There's no doubt that excessive bread and butter is the dietetic worst of those who are overweight. My dietetic sin is sweets and nuts. What's yours? Do you know that an equal amount of nuts counts higher in calories than an equal weight of candy? Yes, one-half ounce of nut meats (12-15 almonds, 8 Brazil, 4 to 8 walnuts, 2 to 4 single peanuts) counts 100 C., while one-half ounce of ordinary candy counts but fifty.

Those who need instructions on reducing may have our pamphlet on the subject by enclosing a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and 2 cents in stamps extra, with request.

Margarines
In the laboratories of the manufacturers of margarines, they have shown that animals apparently do not suffer from a deficiency of the vitamin A, when the margarine is of the best. To my knowledge, this hasn't been verified by government laboratories.

However, butter itself varies in the vitamin A content, depending upon whether it is made from the cream of cows that have had green fodder or winter fodder, and so other foods containing this vitamin should always be taken even when butter is taken.

With children, it would be wise to have them take a little cod liver oil if margarines are used, and in the winter, even when butter is used, for it is very high in vitamin A, the growth vitamin, and in vitamin D, the anti-neuritic vitamin.

There is no doubt that if you have to economize on your food budget it would be best to do so on the butter, rather than on the milk, and give three or four glasses to the child and at least two for yourself.

The following foods are rich in vitamin A: Butter, cream, eggs (especially the yolks), spinach, whole wheat bread made with milk, milk, kidney, liver, tomatoes (raw, canned or dried), carrots, cabbage, greens, peas, sweet potatoes.

I Have Said in My Heart

As Told To IDAH McGLONE GIBSON By SAMUEL STODDARD

LEGS

No managing editor can tell me that men do not read the woman's pages in the newspaper, for I have received proof to the contrary.

"I have always liked your writings, but I must confess you seem to me now as having some queer twist in your mind by what you have been writing to, for and about girls, recently."

"I cannot think it is possible that a sweet, innocent young girl would discuss biological studies in sex appeal. I cannot understand why you approve of short hair, short dresses and a short memory of what was considered modesty only twenty-five years ago."

"That is enough of the gentleman's diatribe to show what kind of a letter it was, and incidentally how old he was. Suffice it to say it was all along the same lines, and I was asked, more or less politely, if I had gone completely crazy. If I have, my friends have not found it out—yet."

"I do approve of short locks, if any woman wants to wear her hair in this fashion. Most young girls look charming with cut tresses, and older women take off ten years of their ages when they bob their hair."

"Did you ever know a woman over forty who would not rather look young than handsome. 'But don't you think it very undignified,' said the man, in his dignified."

"One's body is there in our schools and when we concede that women are bipeds the same as men, so that they can propel themselves upright along the streets, we have placed legs properly."

Someone has said that vice is only a virtue overplayed. Using one's legs for the necessary locomotion is right and proper, but exposing one's self to the gaze of coarse-minded men, as the girls do in these beauty parades, where in a one-piece bathing suit a girl tries to show as much of herself as possible for "no reason at all" is quite different.

Sometimes, perhaps, we will make a difference between nudity and nakedness.

letter. "For a woman to cut her white hair?"

I have always found that the woman who invariably stood on her dignity never had much dignity upon which to stand.

My approval of short skirts is unqualified. They have put women's legs on the map—taken them out of the puny minds of the vulgar male and given them a sane position as a very necessary part of the human machine.

No longer do you see men gathered around a corner where young women board a street car to catch a glimpse of a few inches of a woman's silk stocking.

When I read the other day that the Flat Iron building in New York was no longer popular as an office building, I could not help thinking of the time, before the war, when the windows in that structure were nearly always filled with men watching the wind lifting a woman's skirts. Today no one thinks anything about the sight of a woman's leg.

One's body is there in our schools and when we concede that women are bipeds the same as men, so that they can propel themselves upright along the streets, we have placed legs properly."

Someone has said that vice is only a virtue overplayed. Using one's legs for the necessary locomotion is right and proper, but exposing one's self to the gaze of coarse-minded men, as the girls do in these beauty parades, where in a one-piece bathing suit a girl tries to show as much of herself as possible for "no reason at all" is quite different.

Sometimes, perhaps, we will make a difference between nudity and nakedness.

FIREMEN WIN DIVISION B TITLE IN XENIA PLAYGROUND LEAGUE

By BOB ADAIR

First place in Division B of the Xenia Playground Association went to the Xenia Fire Department when Firemen defeated the Lang Chevrolet Co. team 15 to 10, Tuesday night.

The Firemen completely outclassed their rivals, jumping upon the deliveries of Gegner from the beginning and continuing to hit him freely throughout the game. On the other hand the Lang men were unable to solve the slants of Downey at will and what hits they did get were kept well scattered. The teamwork of the Firemen was probably one of the best exhibitions on that line seen this year. By their defeat the Chevrolet

Co. lost the slim chance that they held of winning first place. They now have only one more game to play. The Firemen will meet the winners of Division A in a series for the city championship sometime soon. They have no more games left to play on their regular schedule.

Wednesday night the Post Office team and the Butchers hook up in another Division B game. Lineup: Firemen: Buffington, 3b; Downey, p; Cope, ss; Dickey, cf; Haller, lf; Swartz, rf; Dice, c; Fisher, lf; Briley, lb.

Lang Co.: Wead, 3b; McCoy, rf; Berger, c; Gegner, p; Lang, cf; Smith, ss; Cain, lb; Gibney, lf; Rachford, 2b; F. Smith, 2b. Umpires—Boxwell and Turnbull.

SPRINGFIELD TEAM IS GLUTTON FOR PUNISHMENT; HERE SUNDAY

Springfield Millard Clothiers are coming here next Sunday with the intention of avenging a defeat suffered two weeks ago at the hands of Jesse Chambliss' trusty Reserves.

On that occasion a free-hitting contest ended in favor of the local ball team when the Washington Park champions nosed out their opponents by the score of 9 to 8. A strengthened line-up and considerable confidence will be the stock in trade of the visiting horse hide delegates upon the occasion of their second invasion of the Xenia yard. They are coming here with the idea that a victory will earn them a series with the Reserves and an opportunity to grab the series and restore the self-esteem they lost in the game two weeks ago. If they are defeated they are off to slat.

Jesse Chambliss has not been standing around the cigar store idle and has strengthened his dykes at all possible points. Harold Dodson, the well-known all-around athlete from Dayton, who has taken up the hurling burden at the Washington St. yard with much aplomb will be on the firing line Sunday.

Pete Tidd, former Silvers High star athlete and more recently a member of the Dayton Central League team, who made his debut with the Reserves last Sunday, has appended his signature on the dotted line and will wear the same uniform at the short stop position in next Sunday's melee. Judge Simler another addition over whom Chambliss is doing much modest gloating will also be available for the infield or the outfield.

The visitors expect to start "Red" Lucas and the game will begin at 3 o'clock.

CINCINNATI HOLDS ROGERS BUT SILENT UPON DISPOSITION

Xenia police have received no further information from the Cincinnati police department regarding George Rogers, local negro, who is held in that city for his alleged connection with the robbery and assault of the Bryan family in Cincinnati nearly three weeks ago.

Rogers, who was arrested in Cincinnati early Sunday while in company of Virgil Bell, also of this city was said to have admitted driving the car for a Newport man and a Cincinnati man, the night of the robbery. The car was stopped at three places which his two companions entered while he remained in the car, Rogers told police. The last house he said, was the Bryan place. His companions, he said, had plenty of money after they had been in the Bryan house, while before that they were without funds.

Local people who know Rogers said that he displayed a big roll of bills, immediately after the night of the Bryan attack. He said that he had won the money "shooting craps" in Xenia, although he was known to have spent several days in Cincinnati at that time.

"Big Bertha" Hamilton, Xenia colored woman is serving a sentence in the Marysville penitentiary for women for cutting with intent to kill, on account of an assault made on Rogers at her home on Fair St., a little more than a year ago. Rogers engaged in a fight with Agnew White, in Mrs. Hamilton's home, and while the two rolled on the floor, the woman stabbed Rogers in the back. His wounds were so serious that he was expected to die, but recovered. His wife, Marie Rogers, sued him for divorce last Saturday.

LUCKY NICKEL!

A Good Cigar Need Cost No

More. Here's How and Why

You've heard about five-centers that "should cost more." You can't be blamed for wondering if there is such a thing. You won't wonder any more if you will shoot one lucky nickel. You'll know and you'll tell the world.

The nickel you put down for a Havana Ribbon means smoke luck from the first puff. It means mildness and mellowness and all-day satisfaction. It means you can keep right on smoking Havana Ribbon cigars and like them better all the time. You'll say, "How can they make it so good?"

Here's how. Havana Ribbon sold at more than a nickel for years. Men liked them. They sold like hot cakes by the million. Volume production brought the price down. That's the whole story. So drop in at the nearest cigar store armed with one nickel only. And get set for a real surprise.

FROM the brilliant lobby of the Crillon to the obscure little bureaux de tabac in the Quartier Latin, you'll see the familiar Chesterfield package in every corner of Paris.

The marked favoritism shown Chesterfield by this most cosmopolitan city of the Continent is added proof that the appeal of natural tobacco taste and fragrance is universal. And that alone explains Chesterfield's world-wide popularity.

SHAGIN MOURNING PASSING OF CYCLE RACER ON SATURDAY

Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, is one of the friends of "Smiling Eddie" Brinck, who is mourning the death of the motorcycle racer, which occurred in a hospital at Springfield Mass., Saturday night. Brinck died of a fracture of the skull suffered when a tire blew out on the fourth lap of a three mile national championship race.

Brinck and Shagin were associated in side car motorcycle races in Hamilton in 1916. At that time Shagin considered going into solo racing, and it was Brinck who discouraged him in this.

The local officer attended the funeral of the dead racer which was held at Emmanuel Church, Dayton, Wednesday morning.

Three hundred motorcyclists, friends and admirers of the dead champion racer, formed an escort of honor for his body to Calvary Cemetery. His home was in Dayton virtually all his life. Recently he had returned from Australia where he took part in motorcycle races.

He has not seen his wife since March, 1924 and does not know her whereabouts, he says. He charges his wife's son and daughter-in-law with causing the estrangement. They were married July 22, 1918.

GET MY GOAT, BUT GIVE ME MY DOG
CHICAGO—Titus Haffa, a politician, appeared before Judge John Sharbo explaining that somebody had gotten his goat.

"Your honor," said he, "I'll be dogged if somebody didn't steal my dog," as he asked the court to issue a warrant for Sammy Rizzon, who, he claimed, had the dog.

"Your dog," said the judge. "I thought somebody had gotten your goat."

"Yes, that's right," Haffa explained. "They got my goat when they stole my dog."

"Then you want a warrant issued for stealing a dog because somebody got your goat?" inquired the judge.

"No, no, your honor, not because he got my goat, but because he stole my dog."

"Oh!" said the judge.

Peter's Adventures

SAVED IN SPITE OF THEMSELVES

Very well, then. If the Bees insisted upon mistaking him for an enemy they would sting him, of course. But Peter wasn't going to be a coward and let anything like that prevent him from trying to save the life of the busy little honey makers. As for Hoppy—the fellow jeer at him if he liked.

THERE WAS THE HOLLOW IN WHICH HOPPY HAD BEEN SITTING. EMPTY!

He was only angry because he was losing his prey.

So not a bit of attention did the boy pay to either the Bees' cross buzzing or Hop Toad's mocking, but kept right on yelling and waving his arms above his head. Suddenly the flyers realized that Peter was trying to signal to them, and all their anger turned to fear. Their buzzing rose louder and louder as each bee, in turn, tried to warn the others of their danger.

"Listen, sisters to what the Two-

Legs says. He is no enemy but a friend and is trying to warn us of that wicked creature of whom our wise Queen bade us beware. He cries 'The bold brigand is abroad in the highway! Fluff has been taken! Others of our sisters have fallen victims!'

"Quick! There is not a moment to be lost. Let us rise high into the air. Better to brave the breeze and storm than to fly into Hop Toad's mouth. Woe is us! What dreadful news have those of us who are left to tell the queen! Will she ever forgive our carelessness? Thanks Two-Legs, dear Two-Legs! We owe our lives to you!"

Humming their gratitude the Bees soared into the air and slowly and sadly winged their way back to the hive to tell the bad news to their Queen.

When he was quite sure that the last one of them was safe Peter returned to Hop Toad. "Sorry old chap to have to scare away your meal like that but—"

Peter stopped talking suddenly; stared, rubbed his eyes and looked again. He had been speaking to thin air. There was the hollow in which Hoppy had been sitting—empty. But not a sign anywhere of the bold brigand.

Next—"A Highwayman Humbled."

DIGNIFIED DUCK COMMANDS RESPECT

BOURNE, England.—A traffic policeman on a busy main road near Bourne, didn't think anything of holding up traffic for ten minutes to give a duck a chance to lay an egg. When he noticed a duck waddling across the road, he halted automobiles to give the bird a chance. But half way over the road she sat down. Having laid the egg she leisurely resumed her journey. After the egg was salvaged by the policeman she halted cars were permitted to proceed.

XENIA GOLFERS MAY COMPETE IN DAYTON DISTRICT TOURNEY

Several Xenia golfers may enter the annual Dayton district golf tourney, which starts Thursday morning at the Miami Valley Country Club. Entries will be received up until five o'clock Thursday. A special invitation has been extended to nearby club golfers, as the program outlined is one of the finest in the history of the classic, while the race for title honors should be a keen one. Arrangements have been made for a daily seventy-five cent luncheon at the club house.

The tourney will start promptly at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, and the entry list at that time is expected to be swelled greatly by entrants during Wednesday and Thursday morning. The tourney will be finished Sunday.

Paul Stoppelman, from the McGregor club, is the defending champ. He has held the title for the last two years, and will be out to set a record.

A handicap affair will also be run in connection with qualifying rounds, with the three net scores receiving special prizes. Players will receive their club handicaps. There will be no prizes for the best low gross scores. Wednesday morning there were over twenty entries for the tourney.

DREAD DISEASE IS SPREADING IN OHIO BUT NO CASES HERE

Rapid spreading of infantile paralysis and exhaustion of the supply of Rosenow serum, believed the only effective treatment, have caused a serious condition in Ohio, according to C. P. Robbins, chief of the division of communicable diseases of the state health department, has made known.

Although fifty-three cases, with six fatalities, have been reported to the department, so far this month, only two bottles of the serum exist. They are in a Columbus drug house.

Since January there has been a rapid increase in the disease, recent tabulations by health authorities show. The figures, however, would not indicate alarming conditions.

According to health authorities, if the Rosenow serum could be obtained. Officials of the manufacturing company told Colonel Robbins they are doing all in their power to meet the demand but it probably will be several weeks before a supply will be available to physicians.

Warning was issued by the department today to physicians to report cases now. Neglect of this and of quarantine measures will be disastrous.

There were seventy-seven known cases on Aug. 15, which have occurred since July 10. Only sixty-seven of these have been reported by card to the state health department. Of these seventy-seven cases six are known to have died. There are thirty-six cases in Tuscarawas and Belmont Counties, including seventeen in Martins Ferry and eleven in Uhrichsville and Dennison. Five cases have been reported in Marion.

There are no cases of infantile paralysis in Xenia, according to Dr. A. D. DeHaven, city health commissioner, and it is believed that the county is free also from that malady. Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner, is out of the city. This locality is also free from diphtheria, which has been spreading in some Ohio counties.

I just didn't know

I REMEMBER now how my friends used to tell me about Prince Albert; how they would make what sounded like the most extravagant claims for it; and how I would say "Uh-huh," and proceed to fill my pipe from the same old package. I just didn't know!

But I found out. One day, the store where I buy my tobacco didn't have my old brand. I heard another customer standing beside me say "Prince Albert" to the man behind the counter. All that I had heard about Prince Albert came back to me in a flash.

I bought a tin. "Took a chance," as I thought. As I opened it, I was met by the most inviting fragrance I had ever known. I thought of the woods after a gentle rain. It made my mouth water for a taste of such tobacco in my pipe. I tamped-in a load and lighted up.

What a taste! Cool and sweet and mild, with just enough body to make every puff a smoke-experience. I tried another load—and another. I was "sold." P.A. was my brand from then on. My only regret is that I didn't make the discovery sooner. Good old P.A.!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener, top, and always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Sally's Shoulders

"Would you lend me a thousand dollars, and not ask me what I want it for?"

CHAPTER XXXIX

FOR a minute it seemed to Sally that she must be dreaming. She stood there, rooted to the spot, wondering why Beau was packing a suitcase in the middle of the night.

Where was he going? . . . Why was he getting ready to leave the house like a thief in the night?

Like a flash the answer wrote itself across Sally's quick brain: "Money!—It's because of money!" She knew Beau and his great weakness.

Then, like a flash she was in the room, bending over him. At her light touch on his shoulder he jumped as if he had been shot, and turned quickly.

Her whisper was hardly more than a quick breath: "Come here!"

Without a sound she was out of the bedroom, across the hall and the dark dining room. She could hear him padding close behind her as she groped for the switch in the living room to turn on the lights.

They flashed up, and she faced Beau tensely. Her lips opened stiffly, not to ask a question, but to state a fact.

"Beau, you've taken some more money. . . . Tell me how much." It seemed to her that she had known for weeks that this would happen.

She was not like a girl of 20 in that moment. She was a woman—with a woman's knowledge looking out of her blue eyes with their heavy shading of lashes.

But Beau wouldn't meet her look. His eyes went from one corner of the room to the other—from the floor to the ceiling. Finally he just flicked her with that shifty gaze of his.

"What do you mean, more money?" he asked bitterly. "When did I ever take any money?"

"Why, those bad checks you gave Ted Sloan," replied Sally, wondering how he could forget them, when she had only begun to pay them off for him.

"Oh, those!" His voice was sulky. "Aren't you ever going to get through, throwing those up to me. They were nothing—I'd have paid them off myself if you hadn't butted in."

For a minute Sally was speechless with surprise.

Then she began to understand him—that he would never take the blame for anything, not even in his own thoughts.

Just as Mrs. Jerome preferred to think that her husband had left her because of another woman, instead of admitting that it was because he couldn't live the way she wanted to live—with unmade beds, hot-or-cold meals taken from cans or delicatessens, dust and untidiness.

"What's the trouble now, Beau?" Sally asked gently. "Please tell me—I'll try not to butt in, as you call it, this time. But maybe I can help."

She could see that he was in desperate trouble about something. He was like a hunted animal in his terror—afraid, almost, to tell his own sister what he had done.

He stood still for a minute, picking at his fingers nervously, looking around the cozy, familiar room as if it were some place that he never had seen before. Then suddenly he turned as if he were going to leave it.

But, just as suddenly, he swung back to Sally, and began to tell her what was wrong.

"I've taken some money, see?" he asked, and his voice was low and hoarse. "From the bank where I work. I've just taken it. Get that through your head. Stolen it is what I mean."

Then he looked squarely at her

with his light-blue eyes, and there was defiance in his face.

"It's sure to be found out, and they'll come here for me—and that's why I'm going now. I'm not going to be arrested, and ruin Mabel's life for her. She's the one I'm thinking about—Mabel!" His voice broke on his small wife's name.

By the time he had finished speaking, Sally was ready with her answer. "But, Beau, it isn't going to help matters for you to run away. It's going to make them all the worse."

Beau stared at her. He shook his handsome blond head daily, and, as Sally looked at it, she wondered how so handsome a head could hold so many dishonest impulses as Beau had.

"What you've got to do," said Sally, thinking quickly and sharply, "is to stay right here and put back the money you've taken. How much was it, and how did you manage to get away with it?"

Beau's lips curled. "I don't trust you or anybody enough to give myself away to them," he said. "I won't tell you how I got the money—but what I did was one grand."

"One grand? How much is that?"

"A thousand dollars," explained Beau. "And it's all gone. I played the ponies with it—and lost it all, as usual." His bitterness was in his voice and face. "I always lose. I never get any kind of a lucky break."

"A thousand dollars," said Sally to herself. Her earnings for a whole year! The mere thought of it was paralyzing.

For two or three minutes she could not think of a thing to say. She stood looking intently into Beau's blank face. And he looked back at her, with his lips hanging loosely and his shoulders sagging.

"Well," she said at last. "We'll have to get the money from somewhere. Won't we, Beau? And then you'll have to put it back and quit the job at the bank. It's no place for you to work."

"I'll say it isn't," Beau answered. "When I see all the jack lying around, and then think how Mabel wants a new dress and how I haven't got a single shirt with whole cuffs, I go kind of nutty, I guess."

"You wouldn't have to have ragged cuffs if Mabel would mend them up once in a while!" Sally spoke sharply, for she was out of patience with Mabel. "And you know you can't afford that car of yours!"

Beau shrugged his shoulders and looked ugly. "Well, don't rub it in! Don't kick a guy when he's down," he growled ungratefully. "Where are you going to get that grand for me?"

"Aunt Emily," Sally told him. "If she has it, she'll lend it to me. I'm going to start working for her pretty soon, and I can pay it back to her if she'll just give me enough time."

Beau looked brighter. He knew that, somehow or other, his women-folk would save him. They always had.

"Goodnight," he said briefly, and went to bed.

Sally tiptoed back to her own bed. But she could not sleep. She lay awake, listening for the sound of a board creaking or a suitcase lock snapping. She was afraid that Beau might try to get away after all.

The next morning at 9 o'clock Sally was marching up River road on her way to Aunt Emily's.

The house on River road looked just as it always did, facing the eastern skies, and catching the pale autumn sunshine on its window panes.

The only difference was that over the gate a wooden sign hung:

THE HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD
CHICKEN DINNERS
SERVED
FROM 6 TO 8

"By jinks, she's doing business already!" said Sally to herself with an amused twinkle in her eyes.

It was like Aunt Emily to go ahead with her own plans, saying nothing to anybody about them. There was nothing nabby-pamby about Aunt Emily. She stood on her own feet. Only she did not stand. She ran. She galloped ahead.

When Sally rang the doorbell a strange woman answered it. A large, plump, comfortable-looking woman with sharp blue eyes, pink cheeks, and a smudge of flour on her apron front.

"Yes, Miss Jerome's here," she said in answer to Sally's question. "She's in the office."

She led Sally into the small room that once had been the linen room of the big old house.

It had nothing in it but a desk and two straight chairs. And on one of the chairs sat Aunt Emily, looking very stiff and prim in a dark blue silk dress.

"Well, if it isn't little Sally!" she exclaimed when her niece stepped into the bright businesslike little place. And what brings you 'way out here this morning?"

She always struck straight to the heart of things.

Sally was like her—direct and quick. "Money," said she. "Aunt Emily, would you lend me a thousand dollars and not ask what I want it for?"

Aunt Emily's fine, firm lips came together with a snap. "I would not," she declared promptly and forcibly. "Because I'd know what you wanted it for. For Mabel—or for Beau! And they've had enough of my money, thank you!"

She got up and brushed the palms of her hands one against the other, as if she were washing her hands of the whole Jerome family.

"Let me show you my dining room," she said, and as she held open the door she deposited a kiss on Sally's velvety flushed cheek. "You know I'd give my niece Sally anything I had, don't you? But the rest of the family have had the last nickel I'll ever give them."

The dining room was a beauty. The chairs and tables in it had been painted soft green and covered with flowered cloths. There were black candlesticks on each table, and they held faded-green candles. The curtains were the softest of white dotted muslin, and on the floor were green-and-white woven rugs.

At any other time Sally would have gone into raptures over the dining room. But this morning nothing could lift the leaden weight on her heart. Nothing could raise the drooping corners of her mouth.

"Aunt Emily, I'm coming to work for you on the first of November, if you still want me," she said. "And I'll pay you back that money, somehow or other if only you'll let me have it. Beau has got himself into some trouble."

"I don't care what Beauregard Jerome has done!" Aunt Emily shook her head vigorously. "I made myself poor to give to his father, and to everybody else in the family, and I'm through!" She brought her thin hand down flat and firmly on the edge of the table nearest her to show that she meant what she said.

Sally shrugged her shoulders. "Well, where do I go from here?" she asked herself.
